

8 Facts To Know Before Investing in a Modern Lawn

1. Is the turf made of nylon or polyethylene?

Nylon is old technology that the old Astroturf carpet was made of, which can fade and absorb odors. Nylon fibers become brittle over time and lack the plush, soft feel of the polyethylene blades in FieldTurf's DuraSpine Monofilament systems.

2. Has the product had proper testing and been proven in all types of prior installations?

Many brands are new to the synthetic turf market and have not been tested over time in "real world" installations. FieldTurf is used by 21 NFL teams including more than 3000 installations in 50 countries; from the Gillette Stadium in New England, to the Olympic Stadium in Moscow, to the Tokyo Dome in Japan. FieldTurf is preferred by dog kennels and day care centers for its soft feel and unmatched durability. FieldTurf's installations represent millions of square feet over 15 years with no warranty claims.

3. How is the turf designed to drain?

The majority of products on the market today have non-porous backings that have holes burned into them for drainage. These holes can become filled with sediments overtime and put your property at risk of flooding. FieldTurf's new Ecobac systems offer superior drainage (up to 64 inches per hour) and exceptional erosion control.

4. Is the product infilled or non-infilled?

Non-infill products are generally nylon types that quickly mat down with use and get hard as concrete. FieldTurf's DuraSpine system contains a patented sand and cryogenic rubber infill that holds the blades upright providing a soft resilient feel year after year.

5. What type of base is the company proposing to install for you?

There are companies that may tell you NO base is needed, and others that claim an inch or two will do. With thousands of installations throughout the entire Bay Area, Heavenly Greens knows that a proper base is the vital foundation that will keep your lawn investment looking great for years to come. A full 3 inches is needed for stability and proper drainage.

6. What's the warranty on the turf?

Read the fine print. Some companies only warrant against fading, and some have no written warranty at all! FieldTurf provides a manufacturer warranty that is backed by a 3rd party insurance policy. Heavenly Greens offers an unmatched warranty – up to 15 years of product protection!

7. Is the installer fully licensed and insured?

Many companies that offer turf have been coming and going the past few years. Be sure the company you choose has a California state contractor's license and a special D-12 attachment. Heavenly Greens has them, along with all required insurances that protect you as a home owner.

8. Does the company subcontract any of the work?

Many turf companies sell turf, but then hire another company to perform the actual installation. When trouble arises, who will take the responsibility? Heavenly Greens handles the entire process from sale to cleanup, and backs it all in writing, giving you undivided responsibility.
